BREAKOUT SESSIONS

Advanced Safety and Technology - Kim Wiley A great deal of identifying information about individuals is available online and individuals are increasingly conducting personal business through online access to all types of accounts. This plethora of information available through data brokers and social media tools poses great barriers to survivors trying to escape domestic violence. Building on her morning keynote session, Kim Wiley will address social networking, data brokering, and smart phone technology. Ms. Wiley will provide tools for reducing a survivors risk without having to 'live off the grid.' In addition, workshop attendees will become familiar with the new Stalking Injunction for Protection and documenting evidence of cyberstalking.

Teen Dating Violence and Technology - Kim Wiley Youth use technology for nearly all interactions: communication, education, entertainment and just out and about. This use of technology poses many great benefits as well as risks. As service providers for teens you have a responsibility to address and support the safe use of technology. Through case examples, Ms. Wiley explores teens use and misuse of technology. In this multi-media workshop, she will demonstrate technology used by youth to harass, monitor and threaten and provide tools to support survivors of teen dating violence.

Counseling Decisions in the LGBT Community: Mindful Considerations - Frank Ledda The talk will be about the dynamics of domestic violence in LGBT relationships and things to be aware of when dealing with folks in this community, such as effects of heterosexism and homophobia on clients and how these phenomenons impact counselor tolerance to difference, coming out process, relationships/sexuality, violence toward the LGBT community and within the community, etc.

Working with Victims of Elder Abuse - Gina Vittone Persons over the age of 60 are the fastest growing segment of the population of the United States. As the older adult population continues to increase nationally, the older population in Florida grows at an even faster rate. The participant will gain insight and understanding about risk factors that contribute to elder abuse; reasons for lack of reporting and other obstacles elders face in regard to abuse, neglect and exploitation; and identify local available resources for reporting, referral and prevention of abuse, neglect and exploitation. The Elder Justice Center, which was established to ensure that elderly citizens of Hillsborough County have fair and reasonable access to the courts, is just one example of how courts can be proactive in meeting the needs of this growing population.

Assessing Batterers Intervention Program Treatment Gains - Dr. Bob Wright When individuals graduate from Batterer Intervention Programs, they are given a certificate documenting successful completion of the program. This workshop will examine whether a General Statement of Completion is sufficient given that victims may decide to remain in relationships with graduates based primarily on the batterer's successful completion of such a program. A more individualized method of appraising and communicating treatment outcomes will be presented that provides a differential assessment of progress along dimensions that will assist third parties to more accurately examine graduates' risks of future domestic violence.

Breakfast, lunch and an afternoon snack will be provided.
