Please join the USF Office of Diversity, Inclusion & Equal Opportunity for the Diversity Lecture Series with Tamara Bertrand Jones, Ph.D., co-editor of “Pathways to Higher Education Administration for African American Women.”

The lecture is the inaugural event of the Diversity Lecture Series, sponsored by the Office of Diversity, Inclusion & Equal Opportunity, designed to deepen awareness of issues of diversity in higher education for USF faculty, staff, and students.

Dr. Bertrand Jones, an Assistant Professor of Higher Education at Florida State University, is a founder and past president of Sisters of the Academy Institute, an international organization that promotes collaborative scholarship and networking among black women in higher education management. Her research is focused on graduate education and professional experiences of underrepresented populations. She holds a bachelor’s degree in Journalism from the University of Texas at Austin, and master’s and Ph.D. degrees in research and evaluation methods for higher education from Florida State University.

Contact Dr. Devona F. Pierre, USF Office of Equal Opportunity, at 813-974-3971 or dfpierre@usf.edu for additional information.
